Lionel Barber recommends

01 US families feel the squeeze

Robin Harding delivered a splash on falling incomes in the US.

02 Fed holds the line on bond buying

Coverage was top-notch, with instant posts, comment and analysis by Robin Harding and James Politi in Washington and Michael Mackenzie in New York.

03 FT Magazine: China 2013 – Special Edition

A special edition in collaboration with the FT's China team. Exclusive reports and interviews, including Yao Ming, China's basketball superstar, on what he plans to do next.

04 JPMorgan braced for action over 'whale'

Tom Braithwaite and Kara Scannell produced a week's worth of fine reporting on the debacle.

05 Cash purchases fuel UK housing boom

Ed Hammond and Jim Pickard produced a Sat splash on how surging cash-only sales are driving recovery in parts of Britain's two-speed housing market, posing a dilemma for policymakers.

06 Nokia's Stephen Elop given €18.8m to return to Microsoft

Richard Milne wrote incisively on the extraordinary €18.5m pay-off to Stephen Elop, the Nokia CEO who saw the Finnish mobile telco sell out to Microsoft, his former employer.

07 Opinion: Syria deal holds a lesson for Barack Obama – talk to Iran

Philip Stephens wrote a very thoughtful opinion editorial on why Obama should talk to Rouhani and why the Syria debacle is secondary to the Iran nuclear confrontation.

08 Partnership faces threat of FCA action

Josephine Cumbo and Alistair Gray broke a significant story in the insurance business revealing that Partnership - a stock market star - was subject of an FCA probe.

09 Deutsche Bank to warn of blow from debt market slowdown

Alice Ross's Deutsche Bank scoop on sluggish fixed income revenues in the 3rd quarter took $500m off of Deutsche's market cap within minutes of it being posted on *fast*FT.

10 Zen and the art of management

John Paul Rathbone's Biz Life feature piece on meditating executives attracted a lot of readers online. It was the product of patient pursuit of the executives to speak on the record, some for the first time, about their practice.
